FOREWORD

Research indicates that active participation in quality Physical Education (P.E) and sport, instils a positive attitude towards physical activity, hence decreasing the chances of young people engaging in risky behaviour. P.E and sport impact positively on academic performance, while providing a platform for wider social inclusion. According to Article 31 of the Convention on the Rights of the Child, every child has the right to play and sport has important power to promote learner holistic development regardless of their age, gender, origin, or whether or not they have any form of disability or special needs. This policy recognizes the zeal with which the government holds sports and values the achievement realized in this field over the years. However, provision of P.E is in decline across all world regions as most learning institutions have not been emphasizing its importance.

Rising levels of physical activity will aid in combating substantial lifestyle disease risks and health crises such as pandemics (World Health Organization (WHO)). It is in this regard that the Ministry of Education (MOE) in collaboration with stakeholders has developed this Physical Education and Sport Policy to provide a guiding framework for effective and efficient delivery of P.E and sport programmes to all learners and communities. The policy is aligned to the Constitution of Kenya, Vision 2030, the Kazan Action Plan, Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs), Agenda 2063, and the Kenya Competency Based Curriculum (CBC) among other policy documents.

The CBC launched in 2017 ensures that P.E and sport secures its rightful place in from exposure to physical activity in all the learning institutions. It is important to note that all the seven core competencies in CBC are achievable through P.E and sport, in producing an engaged, empowered and ethical citizen through nurturing every learner's potential. For successful implementation of P.E and Sport policy to be realized in the education sector, unwavering support from both state and non-state actors is obligatory.

I wish to call upon the National and County governments, development partners, Faith based organizations, Civil Society organizations and other stakeholders to support the implementation of this policy.

Prof. George A.O. Magoha, EGH

Cabinet Secretary, Ministry of Education

PREFACE

Physical Education (P.E) and Sport is embraced worldwide as a key aspect of an individual's holistic development. It is practiced at different levels which include family, community, school and workplace. P.E and sport are critical in nurturing values and skills to help individuals lead healthy lifestyles.

Promotion of physically active life is pertinent in the early life for the healthy development of children and the adolescent youth constituency that is cross cutting, in order to harness their demographic dividends, sport and physical activity nurtures and contributes to tenets of responsibility, active citizenship, moral, social and personal development.

The implementation of P.E and Sport Policy will go a long way in promoting the realization of the national goals of education. It is also aligned to the Competence Based Curriculum (CBC) which provides P.E and sport as one of the learning areas and career pathways. This document outlines the Ministry's commitment to the realization of effective P.E and sport programmes in learning institutions. The policy highlights issues of P.E and sport infrastructure, curriculum, teacher development, talent identification and nurturing, resource mobilization, quality assurance, governance and management, monitoring, evaluation, reporting and learning. It also spells out the mandate of all stakeholders who will embrace multi-agency approach in applying the stipulated strategies.

I wish to call upon all the Early Learning and Basic Education institutions to ensure that P.E and sport programmes are in line with the provisions of this policy.

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

This policy has been developed with an overarching goal of promoting the provision of P.E and sport in basic education institutions. Development of this policy is therefore embedded in the ongoing educational reforms to align the provision of education with the tenets of the Constitution of Kenya, and to position education provision as a key stimulus and enabler for Kenya's socio-economic transformation agenda as stipulated in Kenya Vision 2030 as well as the aspirations of the African Union Agenda 2063 and the United Nations 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development.

The policy draws from provisions in existing policy and legal frameworks including: Sessional Paper No 1 of 2019 on a Policy Framework for Reforming Education and Training; Kenya National Curriculum Policy (2019); National Education Sector Strategic Plan (NESSP)2018-2022; Anti-Doping ACT, 2016; Sports Act, 2013; Sessional Paper No. 3 of 2005 on sport and development and Kenya National Sports Policy (2002) among others. This policy also actualizes the Kazan Action Plan (2017) that calls for states to ensure access to sport as a fundamental right for all and fosters convergence in sport policy development, measure progress, structure and prioritize dialogue and cooperation between different actors and specify linkages with the Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs).

Globally, P.E and sport has been shown to promote mental, social and physical wellbeing of individuals contributing to healthy and cohesive societies. As an enabler of sustainable development, P.E and sport have promoted peace, gender equality, inclusion, health, education and employability.

It is contributing to children's and youths' healthy physical development beside inculcating important life skills such as communication, collaboration, self-awareness, social and emotional competencies, as well as empathy and leadership skills that increases their confidence and capability for the labour market.

Incorporation of P.E and sport in CBC as a learning area and providing for a career pathway in Sports notwithstanding, there has not been implementation of these activities in institutions due to various challenges such as: low perception of P.E. and sport by teachers, facilitators and other stakeholders, inadequate resources such as teaching / learning materials and equipment. Teachers' capacity to effectively facilitate P.E and sport for all learners including those with disabilities and special needs have also been inadequate in basic education learning institutions.

These challenges are attributed to lack of policy guidance and clear implementation framework. To this end, this policy provides a framework for effective implementation of equitable and inclusive quality P.E and sport at all levels of basic education in Kenya. In addition, P.E and sport is seen as an enabler in achieving the seven core competencies enshrined in the Competency Based Curriculum which include: communication and collaboration, critical thinking and problem solving, imagination and creativity, citizenship, digital literacy, learning to learn and self-efficacy.

Specifically, this policy seeks to achieve the following seven objectives:

1. Provide the learner with knowledge, skills, values and positive attitudes through P.E and sport for healthy lifestyle and lifelong learning.
2. Enhance access, equity and inclusion in P.E and sport for all learners.
3. Provide age-appropriate interdisciplinary P.E and sport to nurture learner's talents.
4. Strengthen governance, accountability and integrity in P.E and sport.
5. Enhance capacity of teachers/facilitators and managers of P.E and sport.
6. Promote traditional sports and games to embrace cultural diversity.
7. Promote peaceful coexistence and social integration through P.E and sport.

To achieve the above objectives, the policy calls for observance of pertinent principles in its implementation including ensuring participation for all, inclusion and equity, quality and fairness, discipline and ethics, environment and sustainability, transparency and accountability, rights-based approach, collaboration and sharing, diversity, non-discrimination, resilience, professionalism, innovation and creativity. This policy document is organized in eight chapters and has identified the following policy areas: physical infrastructure, facilities and equipment; P.E and sport (for) development; P.E and sport for learners with disabilities and special needs; curriculum implementation; human resource development and management for P.E and sport; quality assurance and standard for P.E and sport; integration of information communication and technology in P.E and sport; physical education and sport during emergency; governance and management of physical education and sport; resource mobilization and partnerships; monitoring, evaluation, reporting and learning . Each policy area emerges from a detailed analysis of issues and constraints. For each of the policy area, specific goal and objectives, statements and strategies to achieve this policy are clearly spelt out. In addition, this policy recognizes key stakeholders and provides a governance structure based on existing Ministry of Education organizational management framework. This policy is applicable to learners and trainees and their parents, caregivers, teachers, facilitators, instructors and managers as well as state and non-state actors and local communities that engage in the provision of P.E and sport in basic education institutions.

CHAPTER ONE: INTRODUCTION

1.1. Background to the Policy

Physical Education (P.E) and sport is a significant component of human culture at the individual, national and international levels. The Sixth International Conference of Ministers and Senior Officials Responsible for Physical Education and sport (MINEPS VI) in 2017 marked a shift from declarations of policy intent to measurable actions with the adoption of the Kazan Action Plan emphasizing on P.E and sport as enablers of sustainable development and peace. It laid emphasis on MINEPS V (2013) where it was recognized that P.E and sport can bring a variety of individual and societal benefits such as health, social and economic development, youth empowerment, reconciliation and peace. Consequently, nations in the modern world have embraced P.E and sport development. It is considered as “one of the most effective means of providing all children and youth with skills, attitudes, values, knowledge and understanding for lifelong participation in society” (MINEPS V, 2013). The Kenya Youth Development Policy, 2019 emphasizes the importance of sport development for promoting better health and wellness among the youth. The policy thus prioritizes and supports direct involvement of youth in physical activity and interventions that target them. This is in tandem with the view that promotion of physically active life is imperative in the early life for the health development of children and youth including those with disabilities and special needs.

Physical education and sport are an integral learning area in the holistic development of a learner. In basic education institutions, it provides an avenue for learners to be active and learn necessary skills, knowledge and attitudes that lead to a lifelong active lifestyle. Through P.E and sport activities and programmes the mental, social and physical well-being of individuals is improved while creating a healthy and active society.

The history of sports in Kenya stretches way back to the period before the British rule, through colonialism to post-independent Kenya. Before the advent of colonization, Kenyans actively involved themselves in traditional sports such as spear throwing, swimming, running and wrestling and others which were mainly confined within various indigenous communities. Formal education was introduced in Kenya during the British colonial rule. During this period, modern forms of sports and games were introduced in the country. The main objective of teaching P.E in this period was to develop the learners’ character by instilling virtues of obedience, discipline, and submission to authority, which were important in entrenching the colonial rule. After independence, the country embarked on various education reforms which have adversely affected the teaching and learning of P.E and sport among other subjects in Kenya.

Physical education and sport help learners in character building. Participation in P.E and sport offers learners experience for socialization and integration. In addition, through P.E and sport, learners acquire self-discovery skills and develop a sense of achievement, actualization and freedom as envisioned in the Competency Based Curriculum (CBC). P.E and sport is both a learning area and career pathway. P.E and sport is an important enabler of sustainable development. In 2003, the United Nations (UN) General Assembly adopted the resolution (58/3): Sport, as means to promote education, health, development and peace and declared 2005, the International Year of Sports and Physical Education (United Nations, 2020). In 2015, the UN General Assembly adopted the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development. Building on the principle of ‘leaving no one behind’, the UN and its member states adopted 17 Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) to make emphasis on a holistic approach achieving sustainable development for all. P.E and sport can contribute to the achievement of the goals, in particular SDG 3, which emphasizes on healthy lives and promotes well-being for all at all ages. It can be used as a tool to promote healthy lifestyle and well-being of children and youth to create healthy, active and engaged citizens. Further, physical activity is proven to generate great health benefits, manifesting in a longer life, a reduced risk of heart diseases, cancer and non-communicable diseases such as diabetes type 2 as well as anxiety, depression and stress. SDG 4 seeks to ensure an inclusive and equitable quality education to promote lifelong learning opportunities for all.

Through P.E and sport activities, learners acquire core competencies identified reiterated in the CBC. SDG 5 promotes gender equality and focuses on ending all forms of discrimination against women and girls through promoting empowerment of women across the world. Participation of women and girls in P.E and sport activities promotes gender equity among learners. SDG 8 encourages sustained, inclusive and sustainable economic growth, full and productive employment and decent work for all. P.E and sport having been introduced as a learning area and career pathway contributes to the transformation of the sporting sector in Kenya while promoting socio-economic development. SDG 16 aims at the promotion of a peaceful and inclusive society, access to justice for all and effective, accountable and inclusive institutions at all levels. P.E and sport can teach fundamental principles such as tolerance, solidarity, cooperation and mutual respect which foster peace, social inclusion and feeling of belonging that can lead to an active citizenship and equal society (GIZ/DSHS, 2020). Further, learning institutions make sport participation more widespread in order to enhance the economic value of national sport. This can be an important avenue for talent scouting and professional career development in the scouting sector. In view of the above, it is therefore essential that, a policy is formulated to guide the implementation of P.E and sport for basic education institutions in Kenya.

Quality physical education is a platform for inclusion in the wider society, particularly in terms of challenging stigma and overcoming stereotypes (UNHCR, 2001). The participation of children with disabilities and special needs in sports and recreational activities promotes inclusion, minimizes deconditioning, optimizes physical functioning, and enhances overall well-being (American Academy of Paediatrics, volume 121, number 5, May 2008). Despite these benefits, children with disabilities and special needs are more restricted in their participation because of certain barriers that include lack of awareness on the part of people without disabilities as to how to involve them in teams adequately; lack of opportunities and programmes for training and competition; few accessible facilities due to physical barriers; and limited information on access to resources (DePauw and Gavron 2005).

Around 10% of the world's population, or 650 million people, live with a disability and 80% of these people live in developing countries' (United Nations. <http://www.un.org/disabilities/default.asp>). Kenya is committed to promote education for all, including learners with disabilities and special needs into basic learning institutions, as well as ensuring gender equity.

1.2. Situational Analysis

Since the year 2000, there have been tremendous reforms in the education sector in Kenya. The education reforms were informed by the summative evaluation of the 8-4-4 curriculum (KICD, 2009) and the Needs Assessment Report (KICD, 2016) that revealed that the curriculum was examination oriented, emphasized on coverage of content and had little emphasis on the skill development and application among learners. The reforms on the education curriculum were also in response to the Constitution of Kenya and achievement of Kenya Vision 2030 with an aim of preparing all learners for the work environment in the 21st Century.

One of the key reforms in the National Education System is the change from the Objective Based Curriculum to Competency Based Curriculum (CBC). The CBC focuses on seven core competencies: communication and collaboration, critical thinking and problem solving, imagination and creativity, citizenship, digital literacy, learning to learn and self-efficacy. P.E and sport is an enabler in achieving most of these core competencies.

According to National Assessment System for Monitoring Learner Achievement (NASMLA) Class seven study 2019 close to half (47.9 percent) of learners reported that they were not taught P.E in schools. Further, the NASMLA Class three study of 2018 revealed that a notable proportion (18.8 percent) of learners did not attend P.E lessons. This implies that there were variations in the teaching of P.E and sport as learners progressed from lower levels to higher levels. The report further recommended that there is need to develop a P.E and sport policy framework to guide the implementation of P.E and sport in Kenya.

In terms of teachers' development, training and staffing, Kenya had until the end of 2019 total number of 219,607 trained teachers, deployed in 22,577 public primary schools across the country. Post-primary learning institutions had until the end of 2019; 98,124 teachers deployed in 8,822 institutions (Teachers Service Commission, 2019). All primary school teachers deployed are trained in P.E. According to Kenya Institute of Special Education (KISE) 2019, 31,395 teachers graduated with certificates and diplomas specializing in education for learners with disabilities and special needs with adapted P.E and sport as compulsory subject.

The Kenya National Commission for UNESCO conducted a rapid assessment on the current status of teaching and learning of P E and sport in schools in 2019. According to the survey, 69.2% of the sampled post-primary teachers stated that they did not have the required skills and technical knowledge to teach P.E and sport in their respective schools, 62.1% of the sampled post-primary teachers stated that they have not undergone professional training in P.E while 60.8% of these teachers do not take learners through practical and demonstrations during P.E lessons. It is worth noting that post primary teachers are not required to specialize in P.E as a subject. However, CBC has created sport as a learning area and career pathway thus, the need to address the gap in teacher training and human resource management. The report therefore recommended that there is need to develop a policy not only to guide but also provide a framework for P.E and sport, predominantly in capacity building of teachers and facilitators particularly in post-primary institutions, in effective implementation of P.E and sport in schools. The report further recommends that teacher training institutions that train P.E teachers should focus on P.E pedagogy, skill development, and content related to various lifelong learning aspects such as health. This approach in P.E teacher preparation will empower potential teachers not only to effectively implement the P.E curriculum in learning institutions but also to assist all learners in becoming lifelong physically active and healthy citizens.

The findings of the rapid assessment report also revealed that currently implementation of P.E and sport in basic education institutions is hampered by various challenges. Key among these is low perception of P.E and sport by teachers and other stakeholders, inadequate resources including instructional material, equipment and teacher's capacity to effectively deliver P.E and sport. In addition, the delivery of P.E and sport curriculum in learning institutions are not adequately provided for learners with disabilities and special needs. Thus, there is need for a policy framework that guides effective implementation of P.E and sport in basic education institutions in Kenya. The report also recommends that there is need for policy guidelines on government, stakeholders and other agencies involvement in the provision of P.E and sport facilities and equipment in all learning institutions.

Research shows that P.E and sport help learners reach their fitness goals and maintain a healthy weight which is also good for their mental stability which impacts positively on academic performance. Regular physical exercise is good for the mind, body and spirit. This calls for engagement of teachers in the delivery of P.E and sport as a cardinal component of the learning process. Since it is also good for the teachers' health, there should be a deliberate move to have in-service P.E and sport clinics for those teachers in post-primary institutions who did not go through such trainings in college to update their skills in the same. This in turn can supplement the scarce resources available in secondary schools and colleges in delivery of P.E and sport curriculum. Playing sports requires a lot of time and energy; like class work sport require comprehension, repetition and learning skill sets. Sporting activities teach learners how to build teamwork and solve problems in teams. Sports also boost self-esteem; lower chances of breast cancer and other non-communicable diseases associated with physical inactivity and reduce stress levels for both learners and the facilitators. These are wanting presently, in the education system, because of the less emphasis on P.E. and Sport.

According to the Kenya Youth Development Policy of 2019, participation of women in sport is 36 percent compared to 64 percent of men. This points to gender disparity of participation in P.E and sport. However, the participation of girls and women in sport activities challenges gender stereotypes related to their physical abilities, can improve their leadership skills and their position on society in general (GIZ-DSHS, 2020).

1.3. Legal and Policy Context

This policy is anchored on the provision of existing policies and legal frameworks as well as international protocols which include:

The Constitution of Kenya 2010: schedule four mandates the National government to develop educational policies, curricula, maintain standards and assessment as well as the promotion of sport and sport education. P.E and sport policy will actualize this provision.

Kenya Vision 2030: aims at transforming Kenya into an industrializing, middle income country by 2030. One strategy to realize this long-term development plan is to improve the health and well-being of its citizenry. In this respect, teaching of P.E and sport in learning institutions and provision of sporting activities at the community level are viewed as tools of making this goal a reality.

Sessional Paper No 1 of 2019: provides a policy framework for Reforming Education and Training for Sustainable Development in Kenya. This policy is in line with the requirements in the policy framework on reforming the provision of P. E and sport.

Sessional Paper No. 3 of 2005: on sport and development provides guidance and direction on management of sport.

Basic Education Act (2013): provides for free and compulsory basic education for every child.

Children’s Act (Rev. 2012): part II, section 17, provides for the right to education, leisure and recreation, that a child shall be entitled to leisure, play and participation in cultural and artistic activities. The P.E and Sport policy is following a rights-based approach in line with the provisions stated.

AU Agenda 2063: provides for a common policy framework for physical education and sport for the progress and development of Member States of the African Union and their peoples. The framework harmonizes areas of intervention for a concerted development strategy for sport activity in Africa and sought to pave the way for harmonious relationships between actors in the African Sport Movement.

United Nations Convention on the Rights of the Child (1989): Article 31 provides for the right to engage in play and recreational activities appropriate to the age of the child and to participate freely in cultural life and the arts.

UNESCO Charter of Physical Education, Physical Activity and Sport (1978): describe the practice of physical education and sport as “a fundamental right for all”.

MINEPS VI – The Kazan Action plan (2017): provides for access to sport as a fundamental right for all and fosters convergence in sport policy development, measure progress, structure and prioritize dialogue and cooperation among different actors and specify linkages with the UN Sustainable Development Goals.

East Africa Community (EAC) Protocol: embraces culture and sport as both enablers and drivers of a people-centred integration agenda through promotion and enhancement of diverse sport activities as well as preservation of culture.

Kenya National Sports Policy (2002): provides for the holistic development of sport in the country for all segments in society. This policy provides a requisite inter linkage between the basic education sub -sector and other sectors of the government.

National Curriculum Policy (2018): provides for access and transition of all learners through interdisciplinary and flexible curriculum pathways that develops their abilities and talents.

National Education Sector Strategic Plan (NESSP) 2018-2022: provides for the development of physical education and sport policy and promotion of talents and sport in schools. In addition, the plan provides for the establishment of a national academy for gifted and talented children which would include those who excel in P.E and sport. This policy will guide the implementation of identifying, placement and nurturing talent.

Kenya Youth Development Policy (2019): emphasizes on the importance of talent and sport development for promoting better health and wellness among the youth. The P.E and Sport policy prioritizes and supports involvement of children and youth in physical activity interventions.

Kenya Basic Education COVID-19 Emergency Response Plan (2020): provides for physically active individuals to ensure continuity of learning amid emergencies.

1.4. Rationale

The 2019 census report revealed that Kenya has a youthful population, with 75 percent of the 47.5 million people being under the age of 35 years (KNBS 2019). Out of this population, over 16 million learners were enrolled in basic education learning institutions (Basic Education Statistical Booklet 2019).

As engagement in recreational sport declines and unhealthy eating habits being is predominant, non-communicable diseases such as obesity and diabetes type 2 are becoming increasing risks not only for children, but for society as a whole (WHO 2010 Global Guidelines and recommendations on physical activity for health). For the young generation to be a driver of sustainable development and creation of lifelong prospects, there is need for peace, access to education and health. This will be attained by integration of P.E and sport in the education system as an enabler for personal and national development.

Combating poverty and inequality as well as promoting equity and human rights are the most effective channels for securing peace and stability. Through the provision of qualitative and inclusive P.E and sport programmes, children and youths will be empowered to act as agents of change who play an integral role in transforming themselves and the society.

Physical Education and sport are essential activities not only for the healthy physical development of young people, but also to encourage social inclusion and economic participation while promoting enjoyment. It empowers individuals and equip them with social and life skills for a self-reliant life.

Similarly, P.E and sport will enable learners to acquire core competencies articulated in the CBC such as communication and collaboration; critical thinking and problem solving; creativity and imagination; citizenship; learning to learn; digital literacy and self-efficacy. Currently, there is no existing P.E and Sport policy for basic education institutions in Kenya. Thus, a policy for P.E and sport in basic education will provide a guide for learners’ opportunities for career development, physical growth, socialization and intellectual development, social inclusion and integration, develop and nurture learners’ talent and align P.E and sport with the national competency-based curriculum. This is also in line with the First Regional Conference of African Ministers on the implementation of the Kazan Action Plan in Africa (2019) which recommended the development of P.E and Sport policies in all African countries.

CHAPTER TWO: ACCESS, EQUITY AND INCLUSION IN PHYSICAL EDUCATION AND SPORT

Schools play an important role in the promotion of physical education and physical activity to learners leading to increased psychomotor, healthy lifestyle and fitness. Access, equity and inclusion are key parameters for delivery of physical education and sport programs in schools. Quality physical education is the planned, progressive, inclusive learning experience that forms part of the curriculum in early years, primary and secondary education. In this respect, quality P.E acts as the foundation for a lifelong engagement in physical activity and sport. Access for all to quality physical education enables all learners to access equipment and facilities, suitable teaching spaces and appropriate professional development, regardless of any challenges they may have, without discrimination of any form. In promoting equity, issues relating to gender, ethnicity, social economic status and special education needs are addressed and by extent promoting sustainable development goals. This chapter describes policy provisions for access, equity and inclusive P. E and sport.

2.1. Physical Infrastructure, Facilities and Equipment

2.1.1 Introduction

The implementation of P.E and sport requires appropriate infrastructure, facilities and equipment. For quality P.E and sport education to be attained, there is need for a learning environment that is safe, healthy and protective. The competency-based curriculum provides for suitable and accessible indoor and outdoor activity areas, facilities and amenities, equipment, teaching and learning resource materials including harnessing community and sport organization resources and facilities. 2.2. Physical Education and Sport (for) Development

2.2.1. Introduction

Kenya is a sporting nation whose records show exemplary performance globally. The government has provided an enabling environment to promote P.E and sport for all learners in institutions of basic education. In the education reforms, there is provision of P.E and sport as a learning area and career pathway.

To achieve this, there are two interlinked pillars - Sport for Development (S4D) and Development of Sport, which enable all learners to acquire core competencies and values. The delivery of S4D is through experiential life-long learning which combines activities and exercises with educational measures focusing on parameters of social change in an enjoyable way. The focus on development of sport is the enhancement of technical and tactical skills among learners to create pathways for competitive sport, expanding of sport structures as well as the recognition through awards and job creation in the sporting sector. Use of technology should be fully exploited to promote both traditional and modern games, creativity and innovation.

It is through this policy that P.E and sport can foster both approaches to enable all learners including those with disabilities and special needs achieve good health, self-efficacy eventually becoming socially responsible, empowered, engaged and ethical citizens.

2.2.2. Policy Goal

2.3 Physical Education and Sport for Learners with Disabilities and Special Needs

2.3.1. Introduction

The policy and legal framework provide for equity for all learners and trainees with disabilities. The Sector Policy for Learners and Trainees with Disabilities provides an overarching goal of promoting the provision of education and training for learners and trainees with disabilities. Although the benefits of P.E and sport for learners have been documented, learners with disabilities experience challenges that result to limited opportunities to participate in P.E and sport. Availability, accessibility, adaptation and inclusion of P.E and sport are important in expanding P.E and sport for learners with disabilities.

2.3.2. Policy Goal

Enhance P. E and sport opportunities for learners with disabilities.

CHAPTER THREE: QUALITY AND RELEVANCE OF PHYSICAL EDUCATION AND SPORT

To enhance quality and relevance to the world of work and individual developmental needs, the competency-based curriculum place emphasis on nurturing every learner’s potential. P.E and sport is a learning area within the context of the reformed curriculum and there will be need for greater focus on quality and relevance in its provision. In this regard, quality P.E and sport is essential for a lifelong engagement in physical activity and sustainable development. In enhancing quality and relevance in P.E and sport, this chapter provides policy provision on issues relating to curriculum implementation, assessment, teacher support, professional development and management, quality assurance and standards, and ICT integration in P.E and sport.

3.1. Curriculum Implementation

3.1.1. Introduction

The Competency Based Curriculum (CBC) identifies P.E and sport as one of the learning areas, provides a career pathway and makes it compulsory for all learners across the levels of basic education taking cognizance of special needs and disabilities. Although P.E and sport are part of the curriculum, it’s importance as a learning area is underestimated and has not been fully utilized in the past as an enabler of sustainable development. A learner-centered implementation of P.E and sport, including indigenous and modern games, can be improved with the provision of adequate resources, relevant content, appropriate pedagogy and appropriate assessment mechanism.

3.1.2. Policy goal

Provide an inclusive quality and relevant P.E and sport curriculum in basic education.

3.1.3. Policy objective

To implement P.E and sport as a learning area and a career pathway in basic education curriculum.

3.1.4. Policy Statement

The ministry takes cognizance of the importance of effective human resource management and development in order to achieve policy objectives for P.E and sport. Teachers and facilitators are key component for institutional human resource and the quality of learning impacted on learners is observed through their attitude, values and competencies. This in turn reflects their core professionalism in implementation of P.E and sport curriculum through a whole school approach and community involvement. Modern trends of implementation are diverse and include use of technology. To attract and retain more physical education and sport practitioners in Kenya, the provision of sufficient and qualified workforce is paramount. Furthermore, adequate experiential opportunities and support systems are invaluable for P.E human resource. Structured continuous professional development is essential to ensure career growth and sustainability.

3.3. Quality Assurance and Standards for P.E and Sport

3.3.1. Introduction

Quality assurance and standard enhance the holistic development and talent identification in all learners. This is in line with the CBC that envisions to produce all round individuals equipped with the required 21st century skills necessary in the modern society. However, currently the implementation of P.E and sport curriculum faces challenges including inadequate assessments of P.E and sport at the institutional level. Effective quality assurance will ensure the intended objectives are achieved by providing feedback for decision making to improve learning outcomes.

- iv. Strengthen standard assessments for P.E and sport including infrastructure, facility, equipment, instructional materials and learning.

3.4. Integration of Information Communication and Technology in P.E and Sport

3.4.1. Introduction

Information and Communication Technology (ICT) is one of the main drivers of a knowledge-based economy. The competency-based curriculum recognizes digital literacy as a key competency to be acquired by learners as they undergo the education system. In this respect, there is need to integrate ICT in learning and management of P. E and sport to enhance citizens with relevant future skills, foster a culture of sport and enhance access, quality and equity in P.E and sport.

CHAPTER FOUR: PHYSICAL EDUCATION AND SPORT DURING EMERGENCY

4.1. Introduction

Worldwide, emergency situations may occur from time to time. These include natural, man-made and complex disasters such as floods, diseases and conflicts. These situations impact on regular aspects of life including, socioeconomic activities, sport and recreational activities and pose a threat to attaining educational goals on access to quality, equitable and inclusive education and training.

Kenya has experienced emergency situations in the past such as floods and droughts impacting on education and other sectors. Due to the global COVID-19 pandemic, the Government of Kenya closed all learning institutions to mitigate the spread of the virus. This disrupted learning of over 18 million children and youth. Other mitigation measures were imposed on social distancing and restrictions of movement, suspension of social gatherings as well as sporting and leisure activities. This loss has magnified to many undervalued and positive impacts of community sport and physical activity on health and well-being for children and youth in Kenya.

Participation in P.E and sport are crucial for the mental, social and physical well-being of learners building healthy and active societies, resilient to emergencies.

Preparedness for emergencies and disasters is therefore critical for continuous continuation provision of P.E and sport to all Kenyans during and after the crisis. In a report prepared in the context of the COVID-19 pandemic, the UN underlines the important role of physical activities and sport in mitigating the impact of the pandemic on health and well-being (United Nations 2020: Report of the Secretary General). This chapter spells out the policy provisions that will provide for P.E and sport curriculum implementation within the context of emergencies in basic education institutions.

4.2. Policy Goal

To promote inclusive P.E and sport during emergency.

4.3. Policy Objectives

2. Enhance resilience among learners and teachers.
3. To build the capacity of education officials, teachers, facilitators, non-state actors, communities, media and parents in delivering P.E and sport during emergency.
4. To mobilize for adequate and accessible resources for P.E and sport during emergency.
5. To mainstream emergency preparedness and response in the P.E and sport curriculum.
6. To facilitate participation of all learners including those with special needs and disabilities in P.E and sport during emergency in basic education institutions.

4.4. Policy Statement
